

The Foundation's Story

OUR HISTORICAL ROOTS

The James R. Clark Memorial Sickle Cell Foundation was chartered in 1972 in Columbia, South Carolina. The Foundation is named for James R. Clark, M.D. who was a pioneer advocate and physician for patients with sickle cell disease. He served on the Board of Directors and was medical advisor to the Foundation from its inception until his death in February, 1979. The Foundation owes an undying debt of gratitude to Dr. Clark for his vision, his empathy, and most of all, for his commitment to quality care for sickle cell clients and their families.

Did you know:

Sickle cell disease is inherited, meaning that mother and fathers pass it on to their children.

Sickle cell disease is preventable and treatable.
